Every Murderer is Somebody's Friend

Monday's cartoon in the Daily Maverick by South Africa's top cartoonist Zapiro was simple but effective.

It was about the Kempton Park murders. The bodies of the nine victims were laid out and next to each was her name, age and what she had been doing when she was murdered: "She went for a jog; She went to work; She went on a date" and so on.

The caption said it all: "Women Doing Normal Things, In an Abnormal Society."

The Kempton Park murder victims, all women in their 20s and 30s, were found between mid-July and mid-September. As the body count rose, so did the public outcry, with protest marches, petitions and vigils.

But here's a chilling thought: nine women murdered in two months is way below South Africa's average murder rate for women. According to SA Police statistics, between 58 and 60 people are murdered in South Africa every day, of which 15 are women.

Just think about that: It means about 900 women were murdered from mid-July to mid-September.

There was an outcry about the nine Kempton Park women – quite rightly – but what about the other 891 women who were murdered during the same period? Did their deaths make headlines? Was there a public outcry? It's safe to say no.

So why was Kempton Park different? Is it because the nine murdered women were found in a relatively small area - Kempton Park's only about 17km by 10km – over a relatively short time? Is it because it is mostly a middleclass suburb?

Whatever the answer, these nine murders have certainly focused the minds of South Africans on femicide in a way that statistics seem unable to do.

It's hard to say whether anything will come from this public outcry, but if it does, I sincerely hope there will be a focus on what criminologists say must happen to bring down violent crime.

They say it's no good simply to throw force at the problem. We need strategic interventions in the police force.

It's well known that the problems that feed crime include issues the police can do nothing about, like poverty and high unemployment. But an article by criminologist Guy Lamb gives me hope. He says most violent crime happens in just a few hotspots, so police resources should be focused on the 100 worst areas where cops are currently overwhelmed by the sheer number of cases.

Once enough well qualified police are deployed to these 100 hotspots, they must take action in six critical ways: jack up local crime intelligence gathering; reduce the number of illegal guns; crack down on illegal alcohol outlets; improve preparing court dockets to ensure more convictions; boost community police forums; and provide rehabilitation services for offenders to break the "repeat offender" cycle.

Sounds really sensible.

South Africa is unlikely to solve problems like poverty and unemployment any time soon, so targeting murder hotspots with more and better resourced police officers, really makes sense. And it must be made easier and safer for people with information about criminals to come forward.

As Agatha Christie said: "Every murderer is probably somebody's old friend."

The Freedom Front Plus is drawing a line in the sand. Knysna has had enough.

Knysna deserves better than rising rates, neglected infrastructure and services that fail our community. We deserve a greater say, value for our money, and accountable leadership. The Freedom Front Plus has a plan. It is time to turn things around.

THE FREEDOM FRONT PLUS TEN-POINT PLAN

Time for communities to decide for themselves:

Devolve decision making capacity and power to as close as possible to the community; and give communities greater control over their taxes, services, safety, development and heritage. The existing system of local municipalities consisting of several towns should be revised to bring local government back to local communities.

Time for your tax money to work for you:

A substantial portion of the tax money collected in your ward (your property rates and levies) should be reinvested there; use the equitable share to provide basic services to the indigent; reduce superfluous management positions and appoint more tradesmen to effectively deliver services; and ensure value for tax money through quality service delivery and effective governance.

Time for fair rates and taxes:

Stop tariff hikes exceeding inflation; avoid implementing increases by cutting back on needless expenditure instead; implement a standardised rates system and uniform service tariffs; implement smart meters and ensure accurate utility bills; and protect property rights and property value.

Time to repair and build infrastructure:

Spend infrastructure grants in full; spend at least 8% of the book value of property, plant and equipment annually on maintenance; and appoint experts and skilled tradesmen.

Time for financial accountability:

Competent and professional officials; ensure functional oversight by councils and committees; consequences for transgressions; and recover funds lost due to fraud and corruption.

Time for a safe and healthy environment:

Stop environmental pollution; prioritise maintaining and upgrading sewage treatment plants and landfill sites; ensure compliance with the relevant legislation and effective policing; stop water losses caused by burst pipes and leaks; facilitate cooperation between various role players to fight crime and apprehend criminals; and promote a safe environment through CCTV cameras and working streetlights.

Time for job creation and economic development:

Create a favourable environment for the private sector to stimulate economic growth and create sustainable job opportunities; do away with needless administrative red tape and make it easy to do business; and promote an environment that instils investor confidence.

Time for public servants to serve the people:

Stop appointments that are not based on merit; appoint the best person for the job – regardless of skin colour or political affiliation; reduce superfluous senior and administrative positions and appoint more experts and tradesmen, such as engineers, electricians, etc.; and promote a culture of service.

Time for a new dispensation with sound values:

Establish proper and accountable governments based on Christian values; and usher in a dispensation where all groups and communities enjoy equal rights.

Time for effective oversight and stable coalition governments:

Act as a stable, principled coalition partner and fight for the rights of Freedom Front Plus voters within coalition governments; act as effective watchdogs against mismanagement, corruption and incompetence; and ensure transparency and accountability through proper oversight.

MEET CHARLIE

Charlie is one of our long-term residents, and sadly, he's been overlooked time and time again. This handsome boy has so much to give and is just waiting for someone to see what a special dog he really is. He absolutely adores people, is incredibly clever and would love nothing more than to learn new things and show off his skills with his very own family. Charlie deserves to know what it feels like to have a family, a couch to call his own, and someone who chooses him.

If you would like more info about animals available for adoption, please feel free to contact our office on 044 384 1603

This September marks a special milestone for Neovision Milkwood Square, as the practice celebrates one year since opening its doors in Knysna.
Since opening in September 2025, the team has been privileged to become part of the Knysna community and to meet so many wonderful people along the way.

The Neovision Milkwood Square team would like to extend a heartfelt thank you to the community for the support, encouragement and warm welcome received throughout their first year. "We are incredibly grateful to everyone who has been part of our journey. As we celebrate this milestone, we look forward to continuing to serve the Knysna community for many years to come."
